Transit on track to be fully accessible in the new year

Wheels up. Disabled riders say some challenges remain with hopping aboard

HELEN PIKE
helen.pike@metronews.ca

City buses will be stair-free come 2015, a move being welcomed by disabled residents who rely on the big rides to get around.

Calgary Transit expects to have a 100 per cent accessible fleet by the end of 2014, a feat accomplished by retiring what's left of their 36 step-buses, selling them off to other communities where they can and scrapping the remaining 1991 models for parts.

"All our buses ... will be technically all low-floor buses," said Russell Davies, manager of transit fleet. "You don't have any of those big steps going up into the bus.... It does help with accessibility for wheelchair-based passengers and passengers with mobility issues."

There are only six buses still on the streets, and Davies expects the full transformation to be complete by late November, early December.

Though transit is confident this will bring their buses up to par with those facing mobility issues, some users aren't so sure.

September Chabai recently got a mobility scooter and said getting used to her new wheels was difficult, especially when riding transit. She relies on buses and C-Trains daily.

"There are some routes that use the low-floor buses the majority of the day," Chabai said. "During rush hour they still have the old buses."

Getting on the low-floor buses is easier, but often the curve in the front-door still poses a challenge, said Steve Wilcox, who has been using a scooter on Calgary Transit for years.

"Apart from the first door they need a second door strictly for scooters and wheelchairs," he said. "Trying to turn onto the buses is not easy. The fareboxes are in the way.... It's hard to get on the bus."

For sale

The vintage buses have been sold to other cities like Saskatoon and Gatineau. A few have gone to Alberta's Sunshine Village and one bus was even bought by Westjet. The relics are going for around $5,000 a pop.

‘There’s laughter back in the house, and life’

Neighbours happy to see new tenants in Brentwood home where mass murder occurred in April

YASMIN JASWAL
calgary@metronews.ca

Six months after five people were killed in a Brentwood home in Calgary’s worst mass murder, five new residents are attempting to restore some spirit in the community where the dark event unfolded.

Zackariah Rathwell, Lawrence Hong, Joshua Hunter, Jordan Segura and Kaiti Perras were stabbed to death at a party near the University of Calgary while celebrating the end of the school year in April.

Police have charged 23-year-old Matthew de Grood with first-degree murder.

Kadin Osborne, who bought the house in September with the aim of helping the Brentwood community heal, said the reaction from neighbours has been positive since he moved in.

“It’s been really good, actually,” Osborne said. “It’s just an incredible neighbourhood. They’ve just been so receptive to us, and they’ve been helping us with so many different things.”

Osborne lives with four other men whom he met at the Centre Street Church. He said all of them are in the house for the long haul, and they all want to bring restoration and life back to the house.

“I think we’ve done that to some extent, just having a presence of life there,” he said. “There’s laughter back in the house, and life, and love.”

Greg Vanderwielen, who has lived with Osborne for almost two months, said just having people in the house has brightened the community.

“I know the neighbours are really happy to see life in that house. It’s a good feeling living there; I don’t feel any darkness at all,” Vanderwielen said.

Doug Jones, who has lived in the area for 27 years, talks to his new neighbours often.

“It’s nice to have people living there,” Jones said. “We’re just happy that it’s over and we can move on.”

Publication ban

Families’ plea

The accused in the Brentwood case, Matthew de Grood, has had two psychiatric assessments and been declared fit to stand trial when the proceedings begin next year.

There is currently a publication ban on the results of the assessment, as well as other information about the case, and families of the victims are asking media outlets to reverse their request to have this information released to the public.

In a letter issued through Calgary police Monday, the families said details of the case should not be released before the trial begins, and they asked for the media’s sympathy and understanding.

According to the letter, a judge will make a decision on the matter on Nov. 26.

Taxi industry to mull over options to improve service

'Food for thought.'
Stakeholders to debate cheaper fare options, more peak-hour rides

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Taxi and limo industry representatives will mull a multi-pronged report Friday that offers up cheaper fare options, fewer restrictions on luxury rides and numerous other measures that would shift away from the city's long-standing "controlled-entry system."

Currently, the City of Calgary relies largely on population data to determine an appropriate size for the city's taxi fleet, but patrons — and some politicians — have long claimed the system doesn't work come Friday and Saturday nights, when thousands of revellers flood onto city sidewalks in search of a ride home.

The city is also facing increased pressure from proponents of ride-share apps, namely Uber, who say their regulations are dated and put the needs of brokers and drivers ahead of customers.

Calgary cabbies could soon be granted new freedoms, but could also face stiffer competition from limousine and luxury-ride drivers, should stakeholders give the green light to changes to the city's livery bylaw. CANDICE WARD/FOR METRO

In response, the city has now drafted a report for the Taxi Limousine Advisory Committee (TLAC), made up of stakeholders and other public representatives, that suggests seven options for changing the current service model.

Some of the ideas would allow taxi drivers to negotiate their own fares with the current mandated rate being the maximum allowed. Limo and luxury-sedan drivers could also been given the freedom to pick up patrons from the curbside during busy periods and could see their minimum required charge of $84.60 reduced or removed entirely.

The debate at a TLAC meeting scheduled for Friday will help the city's livery department form future recommendations for council, said business analyst Marcia Andreychuk.

"Administration isn't taking a position for opening the system," she said. "It's like a food for thought report that puts all of the options out on the table."

The report states that officials with Uber, an app that allows patrons to link up directly with drivers, have requested the removal of both a minimum fare for luxury rides and a requirement that they arrange rides 30 minutes in advance. Those provisions appear to be the only roadblocks standing in the way of bringing the company's UberBlack sedan offering to Calgary.

Elsewhere, however, the UberX offering, which turns everyday vehicles into customer shuttles, has faced strong pushback from municipalities and insurance industry watchers, who claim it poses dangers for all parties. On Tuesday, the City of Toronto announced it would be seeking a court injunction to prevent Uber rides from roaming its streets.

The company denounced the move in a statement.

"Any attempt to restrict consumer choice and limit economic opportunity does nothing but hurt the thousands of residents and visitors who already rely on Uber for safe, affordable transportation," the statement reads.

Proposals

Options being proposed for discussion to improve taxi/sedan service:

1 Remove the requirement for luxury-ride drivers to prearrange trips with customers 30 minutes in advance: This rule was only recently firmed up by city administrators. The benefit, naturally, would be more available rides for patrons, but the city said greater safety risks come with the system and it's not unlike hitchhiking.

2 Eliminate minimum rate for luxury rides: Limousine and sedan drivers are currently required to charge patrons for a minimum one-hour's service, a fee of $84.60. The benefits of removing it would be the introduction of a "dynamic pricing structure" that could see lower rates for passengers travelling in non-peak times, but the city warns it could create an unfair playing field for operators of lower-class cabs.

3 Permit limousines to accept "street-hails" during peak demand periods: The benefit, again, is more vehicles able to service the late-night bar crowd — 80 per cent of taxi trips during peak periods are hailed from the roadside. The city warns the move would increase the risk of unlicensed limos entering the market and require increased enforcement bodies to crack-down on such activities.

4 Request that council release all 383 taxi plates as soon as possible: Council has already approved the release of 126 of the plates but wanted to see more data before green-lighting the rest as recommended by city livery officials. The city said the move adds supply for peak-demand periods, but would have an impact on driver earnings and the value of transferable plates that some have drivers have paid in excess of $100,000 to obtain.

5 Re-define the taxi meter rate as the maximum, allow taxis to offer consumers a rate lower than the taxi meter: Would allow cabbies to compete for passengers, especially if the rules for luxury rides were loosened. The city warns, though, that increased negotiation with consumers over pricing could lead to more conflict.

6 Create two categories of limousine service — pre-arranged and on-demand: This would allow limo providers to set their own business model, but could increase the risks of unlicensed vehicles roaming city streets.

7 Modify minimum rates for limos: A less drastic measure than option No. 1, but would answer calls from some in the luxury-ride industry that they're losing business because customers are unwilling to fork over in excess of $80.

8 Take no action: The city warns this does nothing to address peak-demand issues and complaints of customers, but would maintain the long-standing "controlled-entry system" that sees the number of cabs matched to population growth and, soon, other service data. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Councillors hope to complete urban hen pilot project by 2016

'We need to have that conversation.' Spring start not firm due to 'quibbling over the bill'

HELEN PIKE
helen.pike@metronews.ca

Urban chickens in Calgary are still out of cluck, as the city is still squawking over the dollars and cents of a hen pilot project.

A motion drafted by Coun. Gian-Carlo Carra is in the wings and calls for the city's bylaw and animal services department to gather information and finances to complete a pilot project no later than March 2016. He expects to have the motion in front of council before Christmas.

Much to local egg lovers' delight a pilot for urban hens was approved in Medicine Hat Monday, one that allows 25 families to house the farmyard animals within city limits.

Along with projects in Okotoks, Red Deer and Edmonton, this should be the push Calgary needs to hatch a plan of their own, say advocates.

"The pilot project is the pursuit of science," said Paul Hughes, who founded the Canadian Liberated Urban Chicken Klub.

"Let's find out if this thing works. Let's look at proof of concept. Let's look at the facts behind this."

Coun. Carra drafted a motion he hopes won't ruffle feathers. He says some Calgary backyards could see urban hens in the spring, bringing the city up to speed with the other projects starting once the frost thaws. The only holdup? Money.

"We're having a little bit of a conversation with administration about how many resources this is going to take," Carra said.

"What we're going to be asking for in our notice of motion is the development of a pilot. We're quibbling over the bill. Once we get that straight, we'll bring it forward."

Coun. Carra said he's confident the motion will have enough support.

He says while some councillors are dead set against the urbanization of hens, most should be interested in seeing how a pilot would turn out.

"We need to have that conversation," Carra said.

Flavoured tobacco. Medical Association president upset menthol not banned

The president of the Alberta Medical Association says he is disappointed the province did not include menthol in its flavoured tobacco ban law.

Dr. Richard Johnston says he wrote to Health Minister Stephen Mandel a few weeks ago saying the association strongly supports banning menthol.

He says studies show youth menthol smokers consume more cigarettes than their non-menthol-smoking peers and they are three times less likely to quit smoking than non-menthol smokers.

Johnston praised the government for other steps it announced last Thursday to protect youth from tobacco.

They include making it illegal to smoke in a vehicle when there are children inside.

"It is disappointing, therefore, that menthol is not on the list of banned substances at present," Johnston wrote in a letter to Alberta physicians Tuesday.

Inquiry. There must be accountability in scalded man's death, say advocates

An advocacy group says someone needs to be accountable for the death of David Holmes, a 35-year-old disabled man who was scalded while being bathed at his group home.

Ruth Adria of the Elders Advocates of Alberta Society said everybody just wrings their hands and goes the other way.

A provincial inquiry is currently under way into the death of Holmes five weeks after he was scalded in 2011.

The inquiry was told Holmes had been disabled by seizures at a young age, was nonverbal and communicated by smiling and making gestures.

One caregiver testified Monday she checked the water temperature, bathed and dressed Holmes, but didn't notice until later that the skin was peeling off his buttocks and foot.

Adria is outraged 911 wasn't called and that police weren't notified until after Holmes died.

'Baby steps.' AGLC uncorks changes so breweries can serve on-site

The Alberta Liquor and Gaming Commission quietly made changes to liquor regulations last week that should pave the way for tasting rooms in the province's craft breweries.

Prior to new rules, brewers weren't allowed to sell their product on-site, but could have sampling rooms to give away small tastes.

"It allows them to sell and serve drinks in their manufacturing premises," said Tatjana Laskovic, a spokesperson for the corporation.

She said many manufactures had asked for the change as part of making their facilities more viable.

"This is one example of listening to the industry more and responding with business changes," she said.

Neil Herbst, co-owner of Edmonton's Alley Kat Brewing, said the change is a welcome one for his business.

"You see these sorts of things in Montana and B.C. and I think it works very well," he said.

Herbst said his brewery already offers samples at the end of tours from a tasting room, but he can't serve up pints or charge for them.

"Really what's happening now is, I can sell pints instead of giving them away," he said.

Herbst said he still has concerns about the AGLC's rules and regulations and said even this positive change came with little warning.

"It would have been nice if we had known it was coming," he said, adding that there is a need for change in Alberta in how liquor is sold, but in the short term he will take this improvement.

Veterans advocates concerned about academy's possible closure

School shutdown.
Decision expected on Juno Beach in December; trustees would have to approve closure

Veterans supporters and fundraisers are expressing concerns over the potential closure of a Calgary academy that focuses on Canada's history and military past.

On Monday night, parents with students attending Juno Beach Academy were told that their kids would not remain at Dr. Norman Bethune School after this year. Administrators with the Calgary Board of Education will now weigh whether the program can be salvaged — by moving its 114 middle- and senior-high school students to Queen Elizabeth School — or if it will close entirely.

But those supporting Canada's armed forces say it's already a challenge to educate new generations about past conflicts and the value of their freedom. They noted Tuesday that the students from Juno Beach, many of which are enrolled in the cadet program, work in the community to distribute poppies and fundraise for veterans every November.

The Juno Beach Academy of Canadian Studies will not remain at Dr. Norman Bethune School, but it could be salvaged at another site. CANDICE WARD/FOR METRO

"They've helped out, they've raised a hell of a lot of money," said Joey Bleviss, chief administrative officer of the Calgary Poppy Fund.

Juno Beach also organizes a Europe trip every year for students, allowing them to tour some of the areas of Canada's greatest military efforts, including the site the school is named after.

Bleviss said he's heard from others in The Royal Canadian Legion that the Alberta curriculum is lacking when it comes to teaching of Canada's military sacrifices.

"We seem to know a lot more about the U.S. conflicts than we do of our own," he said.

Parents of Juno's kids claim the program is still viable and accuse the public board of ignoring them over the years as they moved to two different school sites and their enrolment declined as a result.

Dusty Rhodes, the legion's command Sergeant at Arms for Alberta/Northwest Territories, said he doesn't think the program should close.

"There's a lot of good studying going on there, a lot of it's about history," he said.

"They always put forward their very best.... They're out there marching in their colours and other kids see them and think, 'Oh, that's neat, what's that all about.'"

The CBE said in an email Tuesday that it will be retaining ownership of the soon-to-be vacant Dr. Norman Bethune School, located in Acadia.

"The CBE has no immediate plans for Dr. Norman Bethune School; however, with the continued growth across our system, student space is required," the board said. "The CBE would retain the building and consider how it can be used in the future." JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

City teacher's emotional plea to parents touches homes worldwide

Hard lesson. The story behind THAT kid and the teacher who dared to blog about trouble in the classroom and at home

HELEN PIKE
helen.pike@metronews.ca

Whispered from teacher to teacher, the topic of conversation at dinner tables across the country, and now the subject of a blog post bringing tears to the eyes of readers across the country: THAT kid.

"I know. You're worried. Every day, your child comes home with a story about THAT kid," writes Amy Murray in a blog post she published Monday night. "The one who is always hitting, shoving, pinching, scratching, maybe even biting other children.... I know, and I am worried, too."

The Calgary teacher turned director of early childhood education at the Calgary French & International School published a plea to parents and teachers to empathize with troubled students — a post that resonated with an audience she never expected overnight.

Last week she was presenting her staff with a workshop, helping them understand how to meet all the children's needs while still paying special attention to those that need an extra hand. The workshop was called THAT kid.

"I thought: There's a blog post in here," she said.

Murray let that thought linger and stew for a couple hours. "I sat down and banged it out and clicked publish. I figured it would resonate with the teacher community."

Her post was quickly picked up by the Washington Post, Huffington Post and passed around online until the post quickly went from 250,000 hits to the 1.5 million it sat at Tuesday.

The comments started rolling, and quickly overflowed to Twitter and Facebook posts.

From parents stepping forward and thanking her for speaking up for THAT child, their child to schools reading out the post in meetings and even readers who remember being THAT child.

"Some of what has hooked people is some of the specific examples," said Murray. "People of any age and children included are complicated and no child is all bad, every child has a story, every family has a story."

Reader reaction

- "As I sit here I am almost in tears. I was 'THAT' child."
- "As a parent of THAT child who TODAY needed to read this. Thank you from the bottom of my heart. There are days when i am brutally worn out, tired, exhausted to my core."
- "Teachers will come and go but they are not all the same. Hopefully your child is blessed to have a great teacher like the one portrayed in this wonderful poem."

Sick Calgary boy goes on a $2K shopping spree for free

A Calgary boy who suffered a stroke at birth and developed Neurogenic Infantile Scoliosis won the chance for a three minute-dash through a West Edmonton Toys'R'Us, and up to $2,000 worth of free electronics and toys.

"I want the Xbox and Play Station 3, plus Minecraft and Amazing Spiderman 2," said Aboudi Elouta. "My friend Julia wants a Barbie, but I'll see if I get it."

Though facing his 12th surgery to correct a curved spine, Aboudi is an energetic and positive child, according to his mom Zubaidah.

"He can't do gym or sports, but nothing stops him," she said.

Brian Bringolf, executive director of the Starlight Children's Foundation, said this is the first year for a toy dash.

"These kids are always in and out of hospital. Starlight aims to impact their quality of life, and our great volunteers and donors embrace that, too," said Bringolf.

Choosing the program that's right for you is a big decision. That's why SAIT Polytechnic offers information sessions – your golden opportunity to discover your program options, ask questions and sometimes, tour our campus.

Our sessions are free and range in topic and timing. Details on all our sessions can be found on the events calendar at sait.ca.
Here are just a few we're offering this month:

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY - TELECOM SYSTEMS

If you would like to be part of the high tech generation who likes to provide solutions, harness the power of the latest software, go wireless and connect leading edge devices near and far, then the Telecom Systems major is for you. Graduates of this program are prepared for dynamic careers in today's telecommunications industry.

Join us on Wednesday, November 19 at 7:00 pm in Room E314 in the John Ware Building.
Call 403.210.4076 or Email ict.telecom@sait.ca to confirm your attendance or for more information.

RADIO, TELEVISION AND BROADCAST NEWS

Media is a cornerstone of our society, as it impacts our understanding of current events, heightens our awareness of social issues and influences both our lifestyle and buying decisions. The Radio, Television and Broadcast News program develops a wide range of career paths including technical, performing and creative development. A diploma from this recognized media program has become the minimum standard for an entry-level position in this industry, and is widely-recognized.

Join us on Wednesday, November 19 at 7:00 pm in Room H103 in the Senator Burns Building.
Call 403.284.8470 or Email rtbn.info@sait.ca to confirm your attendance or for more information.

GRAPHIC COMMUNICATIONS AND PRINT TECHNOLOGY

Print Media is everywhere. From magazines and billboards to packaging and snowboards, the list of printed items seems endless. Canada's printing and graphic communications industry is one of the most diverse and widespread information-based manufacturing industries in the country. Using the most up-to-date software, you will learn page layout and design, through to printing and finishing on our high-tech systems. This program is designed to prepare you for a career in this exciting field.

Join us on Wednesday, November 19 at 7:00 pm in Room H101 in the Senator Burns Building.

Calgary dog hits big time with David Letterman

From rescue to star.
Online videos spurred dog's push to fame

CANDICE WARD
calgary@metronews.ca

From neglected beginnings as a rescue dog to the bright lights of New York City, Lexi the dog has hit the big time.

The Calgary pooch debuted on the Late Show With David Letterman Tuesday night and owner Chris Jansen said she performed a ladder climbing trick perfectly under pressure.

"The more stress there is, the better she does," said Jansen. "I was more worried about myself and making a fool of myself."

Lexi came into Jansen's life in 2009 when he got her from the Calgary Humane Society.

"She was really neglected when I got her," said Jansen.

A balancing act

"Seems like she's happier off the ground."
Chris Jansen, owner of Lexi

He spent a lot of time socializing her downtown, in large crowds of people.

He quickly noticed that she had an exceptional skill for balancing and agility.

"Seems like she's happier off the ground," he said.

From there, they have enrolled in agility classes and posted videos online of her greatest tricks — which happened to catch the eyes of the talent searchers for the Letterman show.

Jansen said they cleared the audition round Tuesday morning. They were one of the three acts to tape in front of a live audience in studio for the show's Stupid Pet Tricks segment.

"It was pretty cool, I have been watching him for 18 or 20 years," Jansen said.

Background checks go online with ePic

Update. New web offering set to launch in 2015 getting the thumbs-up from groups that regularly use police checks

YASMIN JASWAL
calgary@metronews.ca

Hockey Calgary's Kevin Kobelka was intrigued Tuesday when told of a new online option for police checks. METRO FILE

Police say background checks are going to be more straightforward and speedier when they roll out an online offering in January.

Called ePIC (Electronic Police Information Check), it will allow organizations to create accounts and view applicants' police information online.

"It's the 21st century," said Amanda Welfare, manager of the service's administration section, adding that the current process for police checks is inefficient.

"(ePIC) is more convenient, and it's much quicker," she said.

The system will remove the need to visit a police station to request a background check, because all information will be available online.

"The ePIC system enables applicants to share their results with multiple stakeholders, allowing for less time delays, reduced associated costs and the potential to expedite placement for potential employees, volunteers or students," said Welfare.

There are already 108 different agencies, from volunteer organizations to not-for-profits to businesses, signed up for ePIC's services, and some more are interested in the program.

"I definitely think it's something we'd be very interested in," said Kevin Kobelka, executive director for Hockey Calgary.

According to Kobelka, volunteers have complained that obtaining police checks is a difficult process. Although Hockey Calgary does not require volunteers to have a police check, it recommends volunteers have one done.

"Hopefully it will make things easier for volunteers, which will give us more volunteers in the long run."

Investigating fire

Crews responding to house fire find one man dead

One man is dead after a house fire late Monday, according to Calgary police.

At 6:00 p.m., fire crews responded to reports of a house fire in the 100 block of San Fernando Place N.E. Police were called to the scene at approximately 6:30 p.m.

The fire was not apparent at first, but after investigating fire crews found the source — a small fire in the man's bedroom. It was extinguished quickly.

The man was taken to hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Police are not treating the death as suspicious, but an investigation into the fire is ongoing. No other details on the man were available at press time.

Charged with 15 counts

Police arrest man in connection with 2010 robberies

A man who was wanted on warrants for multiple break-and-enters has been arrested by Calgary police.

Robert Kelly Wellingford, also known as Robert Keith McLaughlin, was arrested Monday and charged with 15 counts for robberies committed in Hope, B.C. He remains in custody in Calgary.

The 53-year-old was allegedly involved with a number of break-ins and thefts around the city in 2010, most involving strip-mall stores. The culprit — or culprits — would then access neighbouring businesses by smashing through drywall.

Police asked for public assistance with the break-and-enters in September, and said they used information provided to identify a person of interest, eventually leading to the arrest. METRO

Calgary Zoo backs out of program to breed caribou

Federal funding falls short. Advocate says human footprint hurting species the most

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Calgary Zoo officials confirm they've backed out of a captive breeding program once touted by the federal government as a "cornerstone" of its strategy to maintain the population of the threatened woodland caribou.

The partnership between Parks Canada, the province of British Columbia and the zoo was announced in late 2011, a time when there were said to be just 250 caribou roaming mountain national parks — compared with the 800 believed to be there 25 years ago.

But zoo spokesperson Trish Exton-Parder confirmed in a statement her organization will no longer be participating.

"We concluded that the funding proposals by Parks Canada put too much of a financial burden on us at a time when we have many other conservation and flood recovery priorities," she said.

But the Alberta Wilderness Association said it wasn't fully sold on the practices of a captive breeding program in the first place. Carolyn Campbell, a conservation specialist with the advocacy group, said the priority should be fixing the "human footprint" instead in many national parks.

"Although we think of them as pristine, there's a road network and we've also turned to wildlife strategies that artificially increased elk so that visitors could see them," she said. "Then, when we stopped shooting wolves, that bounced up the population of wolves, too ... the net result is caribou, who, naturally over thousands of years, have evolved strategies to coexist with wolves by avoiding overlap with their prey. They're no longer able to do that."

Campbell said scientists made recommendations to classify the woodland caribou as endangered as far back as 2010, a classification that means they're in a real danger of dying off.

"It's very dire for the caribou," she said. "They've been in a downward spiral."

Parks Canada did not make anyone available for an interview but said in a statement it would continue to work with the zoo "to promote awareness of, and support for Canadian wildlife including woodland caribou."

Parks Canada interpreters do assist with some of the programming in the Canadian Wilds area of the zoo.

Severe neck trauma

The zoo currently has three caribou remaining in its Canadian Wilds area.
A fourth, named Chocolate, died of a "sudden severe neck trauma" earlier this month. The zoo says the caribou's keepers did not witness anything unusual and have not been able to explain how Chocolate suffered the injury.

Misconduct. Commons committee says it has no mandate to investigate

Two suspended Liberal MPs remain in limbo after a multi-party committee determined it has no mandate to establish a process for investigating misconduct complaints between members of Parliament.

The secretive board of internal economy, which oversees the operation of the House of Commons, has punted the matter over to another committee.

Meanwhile, it has adopted interim measures that board spokesman John Duncan says could be used by the two Liberal MPs and the two female New Democrat MPs who've accused them of misconduct to informally resolve their dispute.

Those interim measures involve adopting elements of the process in place for dealing with sexual harassment complaints by Commons staff, including allowing for informal mediation.

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau suspended Massimo Pacetti and Scott Andrews from his caucus two weeks ago, pending an investigation into the allegations. The NDP women, who have not been named, have refused to level formal complaints, although one complained directly to Trudeau. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Politicizing the issue?

Ever since the suspension, the two parties have accused one another of politicizing the matter — the Liberals arguing Trudeau had a responsibility to act and the New Democrats saying the Liberal leader revictimized the women by publicly suspending the MPs.

Public service or career? Researcher urging term limits for city councillors

Tired of watching municipal incumbents hold power for years, even decades, Vass Bednar is leading a push for term limits on city councils.

"Isn't it undemocratic to elect the same people over and over again?" asked Bednar, who works as a researcher at the Martin Prosperity Institute in Toronto.

In October, Toronto voters endorsed 37 of the 38 councillors who stood for re-election. It was a similar story last week in Vancouver, where nine of the city's 10 incumbent councillors held on to their seats. Bednar wants to see municipal politicians limited to two terms.

She's not alone. In Toronto, Coun. Mary-Margaret McMahon has vowed to step down after her second term. On her website, McMahon writes that "city politics is a public service, not a career."

York University professor Dennis Pilon agrees that incumbents hold too much power, but doesn't believe term limits are the answer.

"If you want a reform that would genuinely advance Toronto politics, then get rid of the ban on political parties," he said, adding that parties can give aspiring councillors a leg up by associating them with a brand. LUKE SIMCOE/METRO IN TORONTO

U.S. Senate rejects bill to fast-track Keystone XL

Defeated by one vote. Bill was designed to circumvent White House's environmental review process

Quoted

"What is everyone upset about? We've been building pipelines for a long, long time — and we need to build this one."

Sen. Mary Landrieu, a Louisiana Democrat and a co-sponsor of the Keystone XL bill

The U.S. Senate has rejected a proposal to fast-track the approval of the controversial Keystone XL pipeline.

Pipeline supporters needed 60 votes to win approval for the bill, but it went down to defeat by a margin of 59-41.

Had it passed, U.S. President Barack Obama was widely expected to veto the bill, which was designed to short-circuit the White House's own environmental review process.

Last week, Obama suggested that Keystone XL would have a negligible positive impact on the U.S. economy, an assertion denied by both TransCanada Corp., the company behind it, and the Canadian government.

On Tuesday, Natural Resources Minister Greg Rickford insisted otherwise as he expressed disappointment in the result of the vote.

"This project will create jobs, long-term economic prosperity, energy security and environmental stewardship on both sides of our shared border," he said in a statement.

Further, Rickford continued, the State Department has already concluded that the project would not by itself result in increased output from the Alberta oilsands, and would replace "insecure sources" of crude with "a secure, reliable supply from Canada, North Dakota and Montana."

TransCanada Corp. has also long insisted the project would create tens of thousands of U.S. construction jobs.

Greenpeace Canada, long an opponent of the project, cheered the Senate for rejecting the proposal on environmental grounds.

Keystone XL "would enable the production of over 24 million tonnes of greenhouse gas emissions per year while threatening communities and their water supplies," said spokesman Mike Hudema.

As a result of the vote, the question of whether to approve the project is not likely to resurface until the new year, which is when the pro-Keystone Republicans will take over control of the Senate, wrested from the Democrats in midterm elections earlier this month. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Meanwhile in Burnaby, B.C.

RCMP officers patrol a protest camp on Tuesday in Burnaby, B.C. Protesters have been attempting to prevent energy giant Kinder Morgan from conducting survey work on Burnaby Mountain for the proposed expansion of the Trans Mountain pipeline. Despite a court-ordered injunction that took effect Monday, many protesters have refused to leave the camp. No arrests had been made as of press time.

Experts wonder if Ghomeshi can make a comeback

Out of sight. The fired CBC Radio host hasn't been heard from since his Facebook posts on Oct. 26 and 30

Bill Clinton did it. Eliot Spitzer did it. What about Jian Ghomeshi? Will the former CBC Radio host be able restore his reputation and salvage his career?

"I would never say it's impossible to rehabilitate your reputation but this is very close," says Dan Robertson, a partner at Toronto-based Indent Communications. "I think (his future) is ruined."

In the 3-1/2 weeks since the CBC fired him and allegations first emerged, Ghomeshi has been dropped by both his crisis management company and publicity firm. His agent, publisher and former bandmates have also distanced themselves, as have prominent members of Canada's arts community, many of whom appeared on his show, Q.

To date, nine women and one man have told media they were choked, hit or sexually harassed by Ghomeshi. Three women have gone to Toronto police, who are now investigating.

The gravity of the accusations, and the number of alleged victims, make the Ghomeshi scandal unlike many other scandals that ensnare public figures, says Robertson.

Experts say the best approach to handling a crisis means confessing, apologizing and then disappearing until it blows over. And whatever tactics Ghomeshi uses to convey that — for instance, seeking rehabilitative help — will have to be part of a bigger, long-term strategy that could take years.

American crisis management consultant Eric Dezenhall thinks a comeback is possible "but far into the future and probably on a much smaller platform."

"We are living in a time when the world is more forgiving of dark behaviour, but not immediately," emails the CEO of Dezenhall Resources in Washington, D.C., and author of Glass Jaw: A Manifesto for Defending Fragile Reputations in an Age of Instant Scandal.

Another woman attacked by a mob in Kenya

Nairobi. About 100 are arrested in connection with the incident; the deputy president says Kenya is not a primitive society

A mob of Kenyan men attacked and stripped a woman, claiming she was inappropriately dressed, just hours after nearly 1,000 people marched through downtown Nairobi to protest the rising wave of such assaults.

Police responded by arresting nearly 100 people, police said.

Kenyan women protest Monday for the right to wear the clothes they want. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nairobi police criminal investigations chief Nicholas Kamwende said Tuesday that about 80 of the men arrested were conductors on mini-buses, or matatus, where a lot of the harassment has taken place.

The woman attacked on Monday evening was taken to a hospital with injuries.

The mobs of men have attacked women who were wearing mini-skirts or any other outfit they consider too revealing, including tight-fitting or sleeveless clothes.

Deputy President William Ruto has weighed in saying Kenya is not a primitive society and that the attacking men must be arrested. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indonesia

Police told to stop testing recruits for virginity

Indonesia must stop subjecting female police recruits to physical tests in an effort to determine whether they are virgins, a leading human rights group said Tuesday, describing the practice as degrading and discriminatory.

Human Rights Watch said in a report that such tests were a long-standing practice in Indonesia, where patriarchal attitudes and practices in security forces are common.

Citing medical experts, the rights group said the physical tests are useless in determining virginity.

Indonesian police spokesman Maj. Gen. Ronny Sompie urged people not to "respond negatively" to the tests, saying they were aimed at ensuring applicants were free from sexually transmitted diseases.

Human Rights Watch has documented the use of virginity tests by police in other countries, including Egypt and India. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PM seeking a renewed mandate with snap election

Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe called a snap election for December and put off a sales tax hike planned for next year, seeking a renewed mandate for his all-or-nothing policies to end two decades of economic stagnation.

Hitting close to home. Israel's government vows retaliation in act of violence that killed four rabbis, policeman

A Canadian who moved to Israel to pursue his devout faith 30 years ago was left fighting for his life after an attack at the synagogue where he prayed three times a day, his sister said Tuesday.

Shelley Rothman-Benhaim said her brother Howie Chaim Rotman suffered multiple stab wounds when two Palestinian cousins stormed into his local temple wielding meat cleavers, knives and a gun.

The attackers killed four rabbis before being slain themselves in a police shootout. A police officer later died of his injuries.

The attack, the deadliest in the country since 2008, left the Israeli government vowing retaliation and drew the ire of world leaders including Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Rothman-Benhaim said that her brother underwent surgeries on his head, eyes and arms Tuesday and is currently in a medically induced coma in a Jerusalem hospital. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iran urged to prove peaceful nuclear intentions

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry urged Iran to prove its intentions are peaceful as nuclear talks between Tehran and six world powers reconvened Tuesday ahead of a Nov. 24 deadline. Iran struck a more combative tone, warning that the other side's "greediness" could scuttle the negotiations.

With less than a week before the deadline, both sides are eager to avoid extending the talks — a move that would be met by substantial congressional opposition in Washington and hardliners in Tehran. But they may have no choice.

At a meeting with British Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond, Kerry said the U.S. hopes "we can get there, but we can't make any prediction." He challenged Tehran to "work with us in all possible efforts to prove to the world the (Iranian nuclear) program is peaceful."

Hammond said Iran needed to show "more flexibility."

But Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif said it was up to the West to muster "the political will to reach a solution," warning talks could fail due to the other side's "greediness" — meaning demands Iran is unwilling to accept.

The talks group Iran around the negotiating table with the U.S., Russia, China, Britain, France and Germany. The six want Iran to curb uranium enrichment and other nuclear projects that could be used for making atomic arms. In exchange, they offer an end to sanctions on the Islamic Republic. Tehran insists it does not want such weapons and is resisting both strict constraints and demands that they be in place for a decade or more. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Not a Simpsons episode. Ireland's gay bull saved from the slaughterhouse

He faced execution for failure to perform. But Benjy, the gay bull of Ireland, has been saved following a worldwide appeal backed by The Simpsons co-creator Sam Simon.

Ireland's Animal Rights Action Network said Tuesday that Simon is paying for Benjy's transportation to an animal sanctuary in England. Simon, who is battling colon cancer, has been giving away much of the fortune from his television career and is a leading donor to animal welfare causes.

Benjy, a Charlerois bull, failed this year to impregnate any heifers at a County Mayo farm in western Ireland. Veterinarians determined he was fertile, but was more attracted to the bull that replaced him.

After the farmer announced he planned to send Benjy to an abattoir, activists last week launched a social media campaign seeking 5,000 pounds (about $8,850) to send the bull to the Hillside Animal Sanctuary in Norfolk, England, which is home for about 2,000 unwanted farm animals and horses. About 300 donors contributed 4,000 British pounds.

Simon said he was happy to donate the full original cash target to buy Benjy and ship him to England.

"It thrills me to help ... make Benjy's fate a sanctuary rather than a sandwich," Simon said in a statement.

Bull fights take on different meaning in Haiti

Men gather to watch bulls fight in Leogane, Haiti, earlier this month. The obscure practice has existed in several rural hamlets for at least a century. It fits into a gambling culture in Haiti that includes fighting cocks and "borlettes," gaudily painted outlets that play on New York State Lottery numbers. A casual pastime for some rural men, it's a serious business for others looking to pay their children's school fees or even buy a car. For people living on less than $2 a day, prize pots that can grow to 36,000 Haitian gourdes ($775) are appealing. DIEU NALIO CHERY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Neo-Nazis. German town turns far-right march into charity walkathon

A small town in Germany has turned a far-right march into an unwitting walkathon for an exit program for neo-Nazis.

After failing to prevent neo-Nazis from staging an annual pilgrimage to the birthplace of Adolf Hitler's deputy Rudolf Hess, the Bavarian town of Wunsiedel decided to change tack this year.

Residents and businesses pledged to pay 10 euros (about $14) for every metre the neo-Nazis walked, and motivational signs were erected along the route of Saturday's march.

Inge Schuster, a spokeswoman for the town, said Tuesday that the stunt received "a great response," raising more than 10,000 euros for the group EXIT-Deutschland that helps people leave the neo-Nazi scene.

Video shows mafia recruits taking secret oath

Recruits for Italy's 'ndrangheta crime syndicate have been caught on video taking a loyalty oath, swearing "under the splendour of the moon," in a ceremony secretly recorded by police in what investigators called authorities' first such glimpse of the ritual.

Carabinieri paramilitary police in Milan on Tuesday released video of what they said were two "convivial" get-togethers of suspected mobsters at a farmhouse in Castello di Brianza, northern Italy, with one recruit as young as 17.

The oath reminds the recruits that traitors are expected to kill themselves and to keep an extra bullet handy in case it comes to that. The investigation led to 38 arrests. The probe concentrated on loans mobsters made to businesses in Italy and Switzerland.

Liberians hold weddings as Ebola fears on wane

Public awareness campaigns working. Number of new cases has dropped precipitously in the capital Monrovia

Robert Kollie and his fiancee postponed their October wedding as Ebola ravaged Liberia's capital. The government had warned people to avoid large gatherings. Weddings are full of kissing and hugging and just one unknowingly sick person could infect dozens.

A month later, even as Ebola continues to ravage parts of West Africa, the situation has improved in Monrovia and a scenic park in the eastern suburbs is once again busy on weekends with photographers shooting bridal parties. The Kollies were among them.

"When Ebola was spreading and at the same time my wedding was being prepared, I asked myself what will I tell God if I die in this crisis and don't get married?" Yongor Kollie, 31, said, flanked by her bridesmaids. "And so today, I am a happy woman."

Happy but still cautious.

"Even before coming here, we had to wash our hands,'' said the 33-year-old groom, referring to the ubiquitous plastic buckets with water and bleach that Liberians have come to accept as a daily part of life.

Liberia has been hardest hit of the West African countries battling Ebola outbreaks, with more than 2,800 people killed this year.

Letters by famous women go on sale

An unprecedented collection of 1,500 documents from some of history's greatest women is being auctioned in Paris, including everything from Catherine the Great's imperious letter shunning her lover, to Brigitte Bardot's plea to cancel the release of a song that ended up being banned in several countries owing to its sexual content.

The documents, which range from the profound to the banal, also include ones from Napoleon's long-suffering wife Josephine, and a note to a teacher from Grace Kelly. The extraordinary two-day sale started Tuesday.

Catherine — the first of King Henry VIII's six wives — in a 1529 letter intended to reach the pope, asks for Henry's planned annulment to be blocked and warns that Henry will try to split from Rome. It sold Tuesday for 68,750 euros (about $97,400).

The famously amorous Catherine II of Russia, who was linked to the coup that killed her husband Peter III, is seen in an 1762 letter shunning her lover Stanislas Auguste Poniatowski. It sold Tuesday for 17,500 euros (about $25,000).

Canada's biggest earners now a little less wealthy: Report

Statistics Canada. The 1%'s share of the country's overall income fell, while the 99%'s income shares stabilized or rose

Canada's mega-rich lost ground to the other 99 per cent, say newly released figures from Statistics Canada.

The top one per cent of Canadian earners saw their share of the country's overall income tumble to a six-year low in 2012, the agency said in a report Tuesday.

The wealthiest Canadians, the data show, held 10.3 per cent of total earnings, a drop from a peak of 12.1 per cent in 2006.

Go West, young Canadians

For young Canadians looking to land a good job, the West is where it's at, according to a new report released by the Fraser Institute on Tuesday.

- The right-leaning think-tank said Alberta and Saskatchewan offer the best opportunities for the 25-to-34 set.
- Ontario and Quebec have prospects that are just as dim as the Atlantic provinces, from which there's long been a westward exodus of workers.

To qualify for the exclusive club, the report said an individual had to earn a minimum of $215,700 in 2012, a feat achieved by 261,365 people who filed taxes that year.

Women represented 21.3 per cent of the ranks of Canada's super-wealthy in 2012 — nearly double their proportion of 11.4 per cent in 1982.

"Although Canadian men represent the vast majority of the top income groups, the number and share of women in (the) top one per cent reached a 31-year high in 2012," said the Statistics Canada report, which also elaborated on how much the gap narrowed overall.

"The six-year period between 2006 and 2012 also marked, for the first time since 1982, a prolonged period in which the total income shares of the bottom 90 per cent, 95 per cent and 99 per cent of Canadian tax filers rose or stabilized." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Don't panic, but olive oil prices may rise

Augusto Spagnoli, oil producer, picks an olive as he walks in his grove during an interview last week with The Associated Press, in Nerola, 50 kilometres from Rome. If your favourite bottle of Mediterranean olive oil starts costing more, blame unseasonable European weather — and tiny insects. Small drones fall under current FAA rules in U.S.

The U.S. government has the power to hold drone operators accountable when they operate the remote-control aircraft recklessly, a federal safety board ruled Tuesday in a setback to small drone operators chafing under Federal Aviation Administration restrictions.

The National Transportation Safety Board, which hears appeals of Federal Aviation Administration enforcement actions, ruled that small drones are a type of aircraft and fall under existing FAA rules.

The FAA had fined Raphael Pirker, an aerial photographer, $10,000 for operating his Ritewing Zephyr in a reckless manner on the University of Virginia campus in 2011. Pirker allegedly flew the drone, which weighed less than five pounds, at "extremely low" altitudes, including under a pedestrian bridge and directly at a person, causing the individual to duck out of the way. He had been hired to make photos and videos of the campus.

Pirker appealed the fine, saying his aircraft was effectively no different than a model aircraft and therefore not subject to regulations that apply to manned aircraft. An NTSB administrative law judge sided with him in March, saying the FAA hasn't issued any regulations specifically for drones and therefore can't determine their use.

The FAA appealed the decision to the four-member safety board, which said Tuesday that the definition of an aircraft is very broad.

No Wild West

More than a million small drone aircraft have been sold worldwide in the past few years, and a growing number of them are turning up in U.S. skies near airports and airliners, posing a risk of collision.

- Reports of drone sightings near other planes, helicopters and airfields are reaching the government almost daily — a sharp increase from just two years ago when such reports were still unusual.
- "It's a huge win for the FAA, and signals it's not going to be the Wild West for drones, but a careful, orderly, safe introduction of unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system," said Kenneth Quinn, a former FAA general counsel.

The U.S. government has the power to hold drone operators accountable for operating them recklessly. MARK LENNIHAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

"An 'aircraft' is any 'device' 'used for flight in the air.' This definition includes any aircraft, manned or unmanned, large or small," the board said. The board sent the case back to the judge to decide if Pirker's drone was operated recklessly.

The FAA said in a statement that Pirker operated the drone "in a careless or reckless manner" and the fine "should stand."

The decision strengthens the FAA's position as the agency tries to cope with a surge in use of unmanned aircraft, some weighing no more than a few pounds and available for purchase on the Internet and in hobby shops for as little as a few hundred dollars. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH TIME FOR AN UPDATE?

Sex ed. We all suffered through it. But is the program that was taught in schools a decade ago still relevant to kids today? With high-profile sex assault cases in the news, some educators and activists are renewing their call for schools to go beyond the basics and tackle issues of sexual violence, stopping it before it starts. But not everyone is on board with these ideas. Metro's Jessica Smith Cross spoke with people on both sides of the debate.

For

Overhaul urgently needed

What is missing from the current sex-ed curriculum? In Ontario schools, according to some, it's discourse on sexual violence.

Chris Markham is the executive director of the Ontario Physical and Health Education Association, which is asking for sex-ed instructors to talk to kids about sexual consent.

According to Markham, the acceptable standard for consent has evolved in recent years: It is no longer about the absence of a "no," but the presence of an active, enthusiastic "Hell yes."

Markham said that the idea of consent should be taught "as soon as possible," in an age-appropriate way.

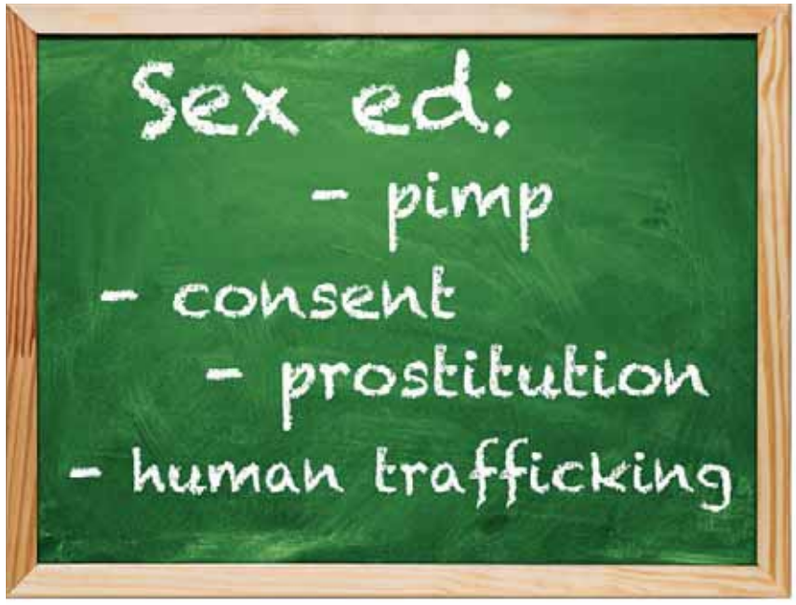
"In Grade 1, part of the reason kids are taught the proper body part names is to help prevent future abuse," he said. "(They're taught) if someone is doing something that isn't comfortable to you, you need to speak to an adult and use the proper terminology when explaining that. That is the beginning of consent."

What students should be taught about consent ought evolve as they mature. It should focus on teaching kids how to make healthy decisions that respect their bodies and feelings, and those of others, Markham said. For example, he noted that the 2010 curriculum states that in Grade 7, students should learn about sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and about engaging in sexual activity only when both partners consent.

Coming at the debate from a different perspective is Mia Biondi, co-ordinator of the PROS (Providing Resources, Offering Support) program at All Saints Community Centre-Church in Toronto. She argues the curriculum revamp is an opportunity to educate students about human trafficking and the sex trade. The idea is to teach students how to recognize a pimp or recruiter, because those who prey on young people typically present themselves as a friend, she said.

That would include teaching students lessons like, "Just because someone is giving gifts or attention, it doesn't mean they're doing it from a good place," Biondi said.

The human trafficking curriculum should be for Grade 7 students, and done in a sensitive, age-appropriate way, said Biondi.



Attempted overhaul

The Ontario government has pledged to consult with parents on updates to sex-ed curriculum and implement a new program in September 2015. The last attempt in 2010 to update the decade-old curriculum was halted due to opposition from some parents and religious groups.

- Among the proposals was teaching third-graders about same-sex marriage, sixth-graders about masturbation, and seventh-graders about oral sex and STIs.
- Ontario's sex-ed program hasn't been changed since 1998, before the widespread use of cellphones and social media among kids. and teens.

Alberta curriculum

Most parents in Canada can opt their children out of in-class sex-ed classes but they have to teach the material at home. Here's a condensed look at how kids are taught about sex in Alberta:

- Grade 4. The emotional and physical changes that occur during puberty.
- Grade 5. The components and function of the reproductive system.
- Grade 6. Risk factors associated with exposure to HIV, hepatitis, body piercing and needles.
- Grade 9. Coping strategies related to different rates of physical and sexual development.
- Grade 11. The role of trust in intimate relationships.
- Grade 12. The consequences of being sexually active.

Against

Sex-ed curriculum goes too far already

Some people were vocally opposed to a proposal to modernize Ontario curriculum in 2010, and they continue to be so today.

Nancy Winslow, a mother and grandmother from Beamsville, Ont., said she believes parents, not teachers, should teach kids about sex. She said the curriculum is not age-appropriate, nor appropriate in any way.

Winslow said students should not be taught sexual consent.

Too much, too soon?

"Children are being exposed to far more than their psyches can handle." Nancy Winslow, mother, grandmother

"I don't think sex needs to be discussed at school, certainly not in the young grades. Children are being exposed to far more than their psyches can handle. It takes away their innocence and it takes away their childhood," she said.

Winslow said she believes education about human trafficking should be reserved for high school students, who would be ready to learn about it.

"Schools should be teaching self-respect, self-discipline and respect for others," she said.

Progressive Conservative MPP Monte McNaughton asked Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne pointed questions in the legislature Tuesday about the government's plan to consult parents on the sex-ed curriculum, and accused the government of breaking its promise to meaningfully consult with parents on what they want their children to learn about sex.

"One carefully selected hand-picked parent per school represents 4,000 parents out of millions of Ontario parents. That's barely one per cent of parents," he said.

He called the process "covert," "a farce," "smoke and mirrors," and an insult to parents.

"When will you reveal the contents of the new Liberal sex education curriculum so all parents in the province can see for themselves what you have planned for their children?"

McNaughton said the premier was "afraid" to tell parents what the curriculum will include.

Joey McIntyre happy to help turn CBS into an old boy-band network

Television. Sitcom star is second New Kids on the Block member to join prime-time lineup

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

With Joey McIntyre on The McCarthys and Donnie Wahlberg holding down the fort on Blue Bloods, CBS is now at 20-per-cent New Kids on the Block saturation. And it's a strategy that appears to be working. "We're on different nights, so that's good. We can get one more half-hour out of (the fans)," McIntyre jokes. Seriously, though, those Blockheads — fans of the grown-up boy band — are showing their support.

"They're very excited about the show. I think of course they're going to be inclined to like something that I'm on or one of us is on, but they're a good audience, they're a smart audience," he says. "We always have a good 25 or 30 of them at the taping."

McIntyre stars as one of the titular McCarthys, a loud and boisterous Boston family that includes twins Gerard (McIntyre) and Sean (Jimmy Dunn) along with little brother Ronny (Tyler Ritter) and sister Jackie (Kelen Coleman), all under the leadership of parents Arthur (Jack McGee) and Marjorie (Laurie Metcalf).

This isn't the first time McIntyre has put his Boston roots to work for an acting gig. McIntyre popped up as one of Melissa McCarthy's brothers in last year's The Heat, though he insists the two families are very different — despite the accent.

"There is a certain aspect to it, a certain niche that Boston brings — an Irish Boston kind of chip on your shoulder, working class mentality, very opinionated," he says. "There's a certain thing that I think Boston people have, a point of view. And certainly that was the kickoff of where the McCarthys came from. That family in the Heat is similar, but without the F-word. I mean, the McCarthys would be very, very insulted if you compared us to that family. We think we're much better than that."

If there's any downside to his career as a New Kid, it's that the terrible timing when it comes to the average age of his fans means he's never really gotten to really indulge in groupie culture.

"Back then they were young girls, teenagers, going crazy and figuring all sorts of stuff out," he explains. "Back then they were too young and now they're all beautiful women — and I'm married and happy. Couldn't enjoy you then, and can't enjoy you now."

The McCarthys

The McCarthys airs Thursdays at 9:30 p.m. ET on CTV.

A New Kid's take on boy band revival

So what does Joey McIntyre think of the popularity of One Direction — and the current boy-band resurgence?

Let's face it, given the success New Kids on the Block has found on the touring and cruise ship circuit, he can't be that mad. And he's not.

"It comes in cycles, you know what I mean? You talk about The Jackson 5 and The Osmonds, then New Kids and then Backstreet Boys and *NSYNC. And then we take a break," McIntyre says.

"But One Direction doesn't come around every day, you know what I mean? And that's just a massive thing. I'm happy for them. Seems like they're making good pop music and they're good guys. I think they should dance a little bit more, but other than that, they seem like good guys."

Willow and Jaden bring the crazy

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Will and Jada Pinkett Smith are apparently ridiculously indulgent parents, and the Times is on it! Their teenage offspring, Jaden and Willow Smith, sat down with the New York Times' T Magazine to talk about their music, creativity in general, energies, philosophy — really, all sorts of things that reinforce why giving teens a platform to pontificate is a bad idea. But it's too late, because they were given the platform. So let's all take a moment to bask in the pretension:

On creativity

Jaden: "Honestly, we're just trying to make music that we think is cool. We don't think a lot of the music out there is that cool. So we make our own music. We don't have any song that we like to listen to on the P.C.H. by any other artist, you know?"

Willow: "That's what I do with novels. There're no novels that I like to read so I write my own novels, and then I read them again, and it's the best thing."

On time and relativity

Jaden: "It's proven that how time moves for you depends on where you are in the universe. It's relative to beings and other places. But on the level of being here on Earth, if you are aware in a moment, one second can last a year."

Willow: "I mean, time for me, I can make it go slow or fast, however I please, and that's how I know it doesn't exist."

On education

Jaden: "Kids who go to normal school are so teenagery, so angsty ... You never learn anything in school. Think about how many car accidents happen every day. Driver's ed? What's up? I still haven't been to driver's ed because if everybody I know has been in an accident, I can't see how driver's ed is really helping them out."

Willow: "I went to school for one year. It was the best experience, but the worst experience. The best experience because I was, like, 'Oh, now I know why kids are so depressed.' But it was the worst experience because I was depressed."

On life goals

Jaden: "I have a goal to be just the most craziest person of all time. And when I say craziest, I mean, like, I want to do like Olympic-level things. I want to be the most durable person on the planet."

Willow: "I think by the time we're 30 or 20, we're going to be climbing as many mountains as we can possibly climb."

Starbucks stop here for Neil Young

Neil Young ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Neil Young, rock's resident cranky uncle, is boycotting Starbucks over a lawsuit challenging Vermont's new genetically modified food labelling law. "I used to line up and get my latte every day, but yesterday was my last one," Young writes on his website. "If we can generate enough attention, we can push Starbucks to withdraw its support for the lawsuit and then pressure other companies to do the same." A spokesman for Starbucks, however, claims Young is off-base. "The petition claiming that Starbucks is part of this litigation is completely false and we have asked the petitioners to correct their description of our position," a company statement reads.

Is it weird that I lost a little respect for Young when he admitted he drank lattes from Starbucks everyday? I mean, that just doesn't sit right.

Airbnb to launch travel magazine

Short-term vacation rental service Airbnb has announced plans to release a quarterly travel magazine that will cover everything from culture and art to food and style as seen through the lens of three different cities. The inaugural edition of the magazine, called Pineapple, will be distributed for free to global hosts, with a limited number of copies also for sale in specialty bookstores, at newsstands and in boutiques across North America and Europe. The initial print run will be 18,000 copies. Stories will include insider tips, personal anecdotes and essays, and will be written by experienced Airbnb hosts and travellers. The featured cities in the first issue are London, Seoul (pictured here) and San Francisco. Copies will be distributed at the annual Airbnb Open summit held in San Francisco for hosts November 21-23.

Globetrotting in the virtual world

Exotic gaming.
Video game designers are setting their adventures in more far-flung locales to satisfy gamer wanderlust

At the beginning of Call of Duty: Advanced Warfare, the recently released instalment in Activision's blockbuster military shooter franchise, the player is dumped from the sky in a drop pod onto an urban battlefield, smashing into skyscrapers and landing in a futuristic, war-torn rendition of a city that's rarely depicted in video games: Seoul, South Korea.

It's a Wizard of Oz moment for the Call of Duty series.

The interactive medium has long built digital playgrounds based on real-world locales. However, recent technological leaps, as well as an endless string of games set in ubiquitous locations like New York and Los Angeles, have motivated developers of some of the year's biggest and most anticipated games to boldly go where they haven't before.

"I think designers are on the lookout for compelling places you want to be," said Advanced Warfare senior level designer Colin Munson. "It's fantasy fulfilment. That's probably why we always see New York and Los Angeles. We made it a concerted effort at the beginning of development to broaden our levels. Seoul was one of the first that came to mind."

Munson found that the city's sprawling shopping district seamlessly served as a shooting gallery, and Seoul's wide streets — normally a no-no in first-person shooter level design — made for the perfect spot to unleash a swarm of enemy drones 50 years in the future.

The pervasiveness of imagery and records online has made it both easier and more difficult for designers. The creators of the present-day open-world shoot-'em-up Far Cry 4, scheduled for release Nov. 18, found a disconnect between what they glimpsed on their screens and what they experienced in person when visiting the country that inspired their sequel.

A team of Far Cry 4 designers travelled to Nepal while fashioning Kyrat, a fictional nation in the Himalayas entrenched in a bullet-riddled revolt. The Ubisoft game's vistas mirror Nepal's lush forests that give way to snowy mountains. The more difficult balance to strike was creating a realm that felt fantastically realistic but wouldn't offend folks in the real world.

"We're inspired by the locations and cultures, but we don't directly reference it," said Far Cry 4 narrative director Mark Thompson.

"We did work early on to create a unique mythology and religion for Kyrat, borrowing from the themes and symbolism of Buddhism and Hinduism. At the end of the day, we're making a video game. It's about escapism and fun."

Apparently, there's still nothing like the real thing.

Bucket list

Tasmania

The remote Australian island of Tasmania is perfect for outdoor enthusiasts, as famous for unspoiled natural environment as it is for the Tasmanian Devil (pictured). Almost half of the island is parkland and designated heritage land, with five regions and two islands. The capital of Hobart is your jumping off point for cool excursions, including a picnic visit to Mount Wellington for one of the best views in the world. The animal kingdom is both rich and fascinating; this is the home of platypuses, penguins, wallabies, seals, eagles and the above-mentioned snarling, carnivorous marsupial, to name just a few. Las Vegas shows off its softer side

VAWN HIMMELSBACH
For Metro

Fremont Street, a five-block entertainment district, still maintains the original charm of vintage Vegas with some of the city's most iconic casinos.

Downtown Container Park in Las Vegas attracts artisans, and features terrific restaurants, shops and galleries. CONTRIBUTED PHOTOS

Today's Las Vegas is all about "aspirational luxury," offering up a high-roller experience even to those who like to save their pennies. With new boutique hotels, celebrity chef restaurants and all-day clubs, Vegas continues to evolve at a pace unlike any other city.

While many visitors enjoy the spoils of Las Vegas — gambling, entertainment and culinary delights — there is also a softer side to Vegas.

"Many properties are non-gaming and non-smoking with nature integrated into their designs, offering a more serene option to the bright lights and excitement that so many others crave," said Naomi Strasser, spokesperson for the Las Vegas Convention & Visitor's Authority.

The new Delano Las Vegas, for example, which replaces The Hotel at Mandalay Bay, is a non-gaming "lifestyle" hotel, which offers an oasis of serenity for those who want a break from the ringing of slot machines.

And the emergence of downtown Vegas as a destination unto itself is the embodiment of "everything old is new again," Strasser said. Fremont Street, a five-block entertainment district, still maintains the original charm of vintage Vegas with some of the city's most iconic casinos.

On and off the Strip, new hotels are offering something a little different from the previously popular "themed" hotels.

The Cromwell, which recently opened its doors, is considered the Strip's first boutique hotel with just 188 rooms, offering a throwback Parisian vibe. It's also home to celebrity chef Giada De Laurentiis' first restaurant. Called Giada, it features the chef's signature Italian cuisine with California influences.

And Drai's Beach Club, located on The Cromwell's rooftop, does double-duty as a beach club during the day and nightclub in the evening (with late-night pool parties) on its 65,000-square-foot pool deck.

The Cromwell is part of a new outdoor shopping, dining and entertainment district called LINQ, located smack dab in the centre of the Strip.

The Philippe Starck-designed SLS Hotel & Casino, which opened for business in October, is located further down the Strip (past Wynn and Encore), but not quite downtown.

At SLS, you have the best of both worlds, Strasser said. It's on the heels of the Strip, but a stone's throw from the vintage-meets-hipster elements of downtown Vegas.

"Culturally, Las Vegas has evolved immensely with new, hip destinations like the Downtown Container Park, which attracts artisans, has terrific restaurants, shops and galleries, and is a neat counterpoint to the excitement of the Strip," Strasser said.

Theme vacations

- For the ultimate guys trip: Drive a Ferrari on the Las Vegas Speedway with Dream Racing, or learn to be a "top gun" at Sky Combat Ace.
- For families: Visit sawfish, rays and sea turtles at the Shark Reef Aquarium at Mandalay Bay, or get up close and personal with dolphins at the Secret Garden in The Mirage.
- Off the Strip: Tour Red Rock Canyon with Pink Jeep Tours, or get a bird's-eye view of the Grand Canyon with Maverick Helicopters.
- For history buffs: Head to the Neon Boneyard, dedicated to preserving the city's iconic neon signs, or visit the Mob Museum.
- For romance: Clink champagne glasses at the Fizz Champagne Bar at FIZZ, a champagne lounge and bar designed by Sir Elton John and his partner, David Furnish.

Tips for planning your Black Friday bargain trip

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Canadians won't be celebrating American Thanksgiving next week but a road trip south of the border for Black Friday has become a tradition for bargain hunters north of the 49th parallel. Here's a few things to consider:

Cost of the trip
The good news is gas prices are at record lows when compared to the last four years but you still need to account for things like overnight accommodation and meals. Travelzoo.ca has some great hotel deals in cities like New York, Boston and Chicago. For the best bargains, limit your trip to a two-night stay; arrive on the Thursday and depart on Saturday.

Timing
Americans looking to get their hands on the best deals are already lined up outside the big-name stores. With some sales scheduled to start at midnight next Thursday, serious shoppers should prepare to be up all night. On the way home, expect long waits at the border. Canada Border Services Agency says peak times are between 12:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m.

Plan out your purchases
Despite the fact that Canadian retailers have jumped on the Black Friday bandwagon in recent years, you will likely find better deals south of the border. However, with the current exchange rate, it is worth doing some cost comparisons. RedFlagDeals.com offers screenshots of Canadian and American Black Friday Flyers that have already hit the market.

Track what you buy
Ensure you know the rules when you get to the border. After an absence of 24 hours, you may bring back $200 worth of goods duty- and tax-free; after 48 hours, your personal exemption is $800. There are no personal exemptions for same-day purchases. Make life easy for yourself and be sure proper identification for everyone in your vehicle is readily available and have your receipts handy, totaled and categorized by the items purchased.

Are you going to join in the Black Friday madness? ISTOCK

The Brooklyn of Paris

Redefining cool.
Remember when every city wanted to be Paris? Now a part of the City of Light is hoping it's hip enough to be like New York's booming borough

Paris' once gritty suburb Pantin is drawing comparisons to Brooklyn, with its skyrocketing real estate, industrial buildings and influx of artists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For more than a century, cities around the world have compared themselves to Paris. Many claim to be the Paris of the East: Bucharest, Prague, Istanbul, Beirut and Shanghai to name a few. There's also the Paris of North America (Montreal), the Paris of South America (Buenos Aires) and the Paris of the Plains — Kansas City in the Jazz Age.

But now the wannabe city is Brooklyn. Every neighbourhood with a critical mass of bearded hipsters, bike shops and vegan cafes calls itself "the new Brooklyn." Ballard is the Brooklyn of Seattle. Glasgow and Melbourne both claim Brooklyn cool. And Oakland, Calif., has been called the Brooklyn of San Francisco so many times that Julia Cosgrove, editor of AFAR travel magazine, says she "can't bear to read another story about it."

There's even a Brooklyn of Paris: the once-gritty suburb of Pantin. Its derelict, graffiti-covered warehouses have been taken over by galleries and artists, turning it into the hippest place in the City of Light. Just like in Brooklyn, real estate prices have shot up, and old industrial buildings now house luxury lofts.

"It may have a way to go before it's on a par with Brooklyn, but I expect it will continue to develop, considering how much investment and risk-taking is going on there — alongside the natural flux of artists toward the area," said artist Oliver Beer, who works both with a gallery in Pantin and with the Museum of Modern Art's contemporary arts outpost, PS1, in New York City.

Other signs of what's called the "Brooklynization of Paris" include gluten-free restaurants and juice bars popping up. "It used to be when young chefs studied under the great chefs, they wanted to open important restaurants or go to the countryside and get their Michelin star. Now they're rejecting that model, they're saying, 'I'm going to do more back-to-the-roots, farm-to-table cooking in a small restaurant with a few tables,'" said Katherine Johnstone, a spokeswoman for Atout France USA, the French tourism agency in New York, describing a shift that some observers compare to Brooklyn's culinary scene.

On Oct. 10, The Atlantic published a list of places The New York Times has compared to Brooklyn with headlines like Brooklyn in Beijing and Brooklyn on the Hudson. Undaunted, a Nov. 6 Times headline read: A Touch of Brooklyn in Ridgewood, Queens.

And if Queens is the new Brooklyn, there's already a name for that, too: Quooklyn.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brooklyn's boom

Brooklyn's emergence as a global symbol of all things trendy marks quite a turnaround for a place once mocked as Manhattan's less sophisticated neighbour. "We've become the epicentre of cool as cool is now defined," says Marty Markowitz, 69, who was born and raised in Brooklyn in an era when it was better known for ethnic enclaves, working class culture and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

When a vacation is all you never wanted

Career. Basking in the sun for a short while doesn't necessarily lead to relaxation

You've found the five-star hotel, but your brain's still in business mode. Instead of working on that laptop, work on engaging in a relaxing activity. CONTRIBUTED

Need a vacation to recover from that vacation? You're not alone, say experts from the University of Ottawa.

Typical vacations do not decrease long-term work-related stress levels, according to Jane O'Reilly, a human resources professor. In other words, an employee goes away, stress goes down. He comes back, stress goes up.

What's more, if vacation experiences are "resource-consuming," they can leave someone even feeling more drained than before, said another human resources professor, Laurent Lapierre.

Experts say that with a little planning, though, these pitfalls can be avoided. Here are ways to get more rest, have more fun, and avoid wasting that precious summer reprieve.

Pitfalls of being productive

When people experience work-related stress during a vacation, it can be because they are "output-oriented" individuals, according to management professor Michael Miles.

"They worry about getting this done and getting that done," he said.

Some people just need to recognize that this need to be productive is an aspect of their personality, he said.

"The one thing that I found for myself — I fall into that category — is that I make goals for my vacation itself. So for example, one of my goals for this vacation is to clean out my garage, which sounds really crazy, but it's really relaxing. It's enjoyable because it's a goal and I can check it off and feel like I've achieved something."

Working on personal projects and checking items off a "bucket list" can both be fulfilling alternatives to work, according to O'Reilly.

Slow and steady

Soup Week. This French soup, with its under-the-sea combo, continues Metro's week of brothy dishes

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

This recipe makes six to eight servings. EMILY RICHARDS

1. Rouille: Combine bread crumbs, peppers, garlic, cayenne and mayonnaise in blender and buzz until coarse. Drizzle in oil and blend until smooth; set aside.

2. Heat oil over medium heat and cook shallots and fennel, stirring often for about 10 minutes or until softened. Stir in broth, tomatoes, thyme, bay leaves and saffron; bring to the boil. Boil gently for 10 minutes.

3. Add potatoes, reduce heat and simmer for 5 minutes. Add mussels, crab legs, clams and monkfish; stir gently to combine into broth. Cover and cook for about 8 minutes or until mussels and clams are open and monkfish is firm.

4. Ladle into shallow soup bowls and dollop each with a spoonful of rouille. Serve with crusty bread.

Ingredients

Rouille
- 1 cup (250 ml) bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) roasted red peppers
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) cayenne
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) virgin olive oil

Bouillabaisse
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) extra virgin olive oil
- 2 large shallots, diced
- 1 small fennel bulb, trimmed, diced
- 6 cups (1.5 l) vegetable broth
- 1 can (28 oz/796 ml) diced tomatoes
- 2 sprigs fresh thyme
- 2 bay leaves
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) saffron threads
- 12 oz (375 g) mini red potatoes, halved
- 1 lb (454 g) mussels, scrubbed and bearded
- 1 lb (454 g) crab legs
- 1 lb (454 g) small pasta clams
- 8 oz (227 g) monkfish

Penguins pounce on Price, win in shutout

The Penguins' Steve Downie celebrates a goal scored against Canadiens goalie Carey Price and forward Brendan Gallagher on Tuesday night in Montreal. Marc-Andre Fleury made 27 saves for his league-leading fourth shutout of the season as Pittsburgh won 4-0. Downie, Beau Bennett, Brandon Sutter and Sidney Crosby were the goal scorers. The red-hot Penguins have now won 10 of their last 11 games.

Grey Cup organizers confident of a sellout

CFL. Despite big draws being ousted, GM of the festival says remaining tickets will move following division finals

Grey Cup organizers were hoping for different outcomes in the CFL playoffs over the weekend, but they still believe the big game on Nov. 30 will be a sellout.

Both the hometown B.C. Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders — who have the most rabid fan base in the league — were eliminated from post-season play on Sunday.

Despite those disappointing results, 102nd Grey Cup Festival general manager Jamie Pitblado is confident the remaining 6,500 unsold tickets will be gone by kickoff on Nov. 30 at Vancouver's BC Place Stadium.

"Once we get those two finalists the big push will start and we'll certainly be sold out come game time," Pitblado said Tuesday. "We were certainly hoping the Lions would have a stronger showing and continue the march and we'd move a few more (tickets) along the way, but it is what it is.

"We always prepare a game and a festival not knowing who's going to be in it. The last three years organizers got spoiled having the home team in. Now it's just back to having to do some hard work and push the tickets."

Last Grey Cup game in B.C.

BC Place Stadium hosted a sold-out Grey Cup back in 2011 when the Lions beat the Blue Bombers.

The Calgary Stampeders host the Edmonton Eskimos in the West Division final, while the Hamilton Tiger-Cats welcome the Montreal Alouettes in the East showdown.

"I think all the teams will draw well. Certainly if you look at (Lions) home games, when we play Calgary we get quite a large contingent of red and white," said Pitblado.

"So Calgary would be a strong one and a helpful one, but Edmonton's playing some strong football right now so I wouldn't put anything past them."

Summer Games open for multi-city bids: IOC

Breaking from the tradition of awarding the Olympics only to a single host city, the IOC is opening the door to possible wider bids, including bids from an entire country, joint bids from more than one city and possibly events held in more than one country.

"We want to create more diversity in the candidatures," president Thomas Bach told a small group of reporters at the Olympic Museum in Lausanne. "There is no one-size-fits-all solution." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fighting stage 4 cancer

"For me to go home and sit on the couch doesn't make a lot of sense."

Senators general manager Bryan Murray, following an NHL meeting that he attended after postponing chemotherapy treatment of his stage 4 colon cancer. He's lost more than 40 pounds and doctors tell him there is no cure for him.

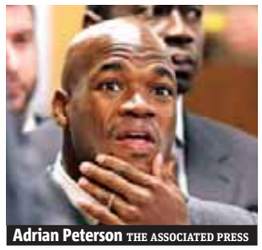
Vikings' Peterson suspended for rest of season at least

NFL. Players' union plans to appeal ban of star running back



Adrian Peterson THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Adrian Peterson's future with the Minnesota Vikings dimmed further Tuesday, with the NFL suspending the star running back without pay for at least the rest of the season.

As his representatives initiated an appeal, Peterson remained at the centre of an escalating dispute between the league and the NFL Players Association over the player discipline process.

Commissioner Roger Goodell told Peterson he will not be considered for reinstatement before April 15 for his violation of the NFL personal conduct policy — the first example of a crackdown on players involved with domestic violence.

The NFLPA quickly announced it would immediately appeal, calling for a neutral arbitrator to handle it, and sharply rebuked the league for what it labelled as inconsistency and unfairness in determining the discipline. The NFL's words were even stronger, with a nearly 1,600-word statement spelling out the conditions for Peterson's path to return to the field and describing the reasons for the stiff punishment.

Goodell pointed to the child's age and the significant physical difference between Peterson and his son.

Goodell also came down on Peterson for showing "no meaningful remorse" for hurting the boy and expressed concern that he "may feel free to engage in similar conduct in the future." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Leafs blasted by Preds on ACC ice

Jonathan Bernier lasted all of 20 minutes while Pekka Rinne continued his early-season dominance as the Nashville Predators hammered the Toronto Maple Leafs 9-2 at the Air Canada Centre on Tuesday.

The Leafs goalie, who had allowed three goals in his previous two starts, gave up that many in the first period alone — two of them to Taylor Beck — before he was relieved by James Reimer. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bryant's shooting gives Lakers 2nd win of season

Kobe Bryant scored 28 points and the Los Angeles Lakers won for only the second time this season, beating the Atlanta Hawks 114-109 Tuesday night.

Bryant's biggest shot came with 1:11 remaining, when he backed in against Thabo Sefolosha and made a fadeaway jumper despite being fouled. Bryant slapped hands with a fan on the front row and completed the three-point play, giving the Lakers a 108-102 lead. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soccer. Goalkeeper helps Canada avoid blowout

Goalkeeper Milan Borjan made several big saves Tuesday to help Canada tie Panama 0-0 in an international soccer friendly.

The Canadian men offered little in terms of attack other than a late surge that saw play in the Panama end. But a draw in the hostile confines of Central America represents progress for a Canadian side building for the future.

Panama was reduced to 10 men after Anibal Godoy was sent off for a second yellow in the 74th minute.

Canada currently languishes at an all-time low world No. 122. It stands 16th in CONCACAF, which covers North and Central America and the Caribbean. Panama ranks 56th in the world and fourth in CONCACAF. THE CANADIAN PRESS

2015 Buick Enclave

- Type. Four-door, 7- or 8-passenger full-size SUV
- Engines. 3.6-litre V6 with direct injection (288 hp)
- Transmissions. Six-speed automatic
- Price. $47,760 base, $55,260 as-tested

Market position

These full-sized people-movers make up a small segment of the market, but they're popular with drivers who need extra seats but don't want a minivan. Although it shares its engine and platform with other GM models, there's enough of a difference in its appointments to give it the unique look and feel that Buick buyers want.

Points

- The three rows of seating can make this a viable alternative to a minivan for many families.
- The priciest of the three vehicles built off this platform, it also offers the most luxury features.
- The available all-wheel-drive automatically distributes power to improve traction in slippery conditions.

The third row of seats is both easy to access and comfortable.

Interesting features

Heated steering wheel, rear park assist, tri-zone automatic climate control, remote starter, and available power-folding mirrors, heated and cooled seats, lane-departure warning and forward-collision alert.

Smooth, suave and powerful

Review. Buick Enclave has room for eight, but looks and drives much better than a minivan

JIL MCINTOSH
drive@metronews.ca

No one was quite sure what would happen when Buick entered the SUV market with its all-new Enclave in 2008, but it turned out to be a best-seller for the company, which now also offers a compact sport-ute called the Encore.

The Enclave, based on a model that's also sold as the Chevrolet Traverse and GMC Acadia, has undergone several refinements since that first model. The 2015 version is mostly unchanged from 2014, with just the new availability of a heated wood-and-leather steering wheel.

In front-wheel drive, it comes in a single trim level starting at $47,760. I drove it in the all-wheel-drive configuration, which starts at $50,760.

My Premium tester started at $55,260 and had a few added options, including a twin-pane sunroof and a trailer tow package, which includes heavy-duty cooling and raises the Enclave's towing ability from 2,000 to 4,500 lb.

Power comes from a smooth-running 3.6-litre V6, mated to a six-speed automatic transmission.

The ride is composed and luxurious, and the Enclave handles well without feeling heavy.

Although impressive at first glance, the interior's many plastic bits look cheap.

What really impresses is its surprisingly tight turning circle: I've driven small sedans that can't turn around as easily as this big ute does. That's a real bonus when you're trying to park it in tight quarters.

The Enclave includes three rows of seats and, unlike some of its competitors, it's not only easy to get into the third row, but there's also good legroom back there and the seats are comfortable. Both the second and third rows fold flat to provide more cargo space.

If there's a downside to this vehicle, it's the interior. Although it looks spectacular at first glance, with double-stitched accents and wood trim, there's far too much hard, pebbly plastic in the lower portions of the dash and doors — making it seem much cheaper.

My power-operated liftgate was also a little creakier than I expected.

Beyond those complaints, though, the Enclave is a well-equipped, comfortable, and powerful way to get a lot of passengers wherever they need to go.

Thanks Norway, for making us look bad

Autopilot. Nordic nation leads the world in per-capita wealth, energy efficiency and, now, EV ownership

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Norway is starting to get on my nerves. The list of things it's good at is getting too long.

I wouldn't mind so much if the list was contained to Nordic things, such as ski jumping, cross-country skiing, and eating the most lingonberries per capita.

But, no, the things Norway is good at — world-topping even — are both significant and universal.

A few examples:

How about the most sovereign wealth per capita? Sure, Norway has oil, but so do a lot of other countries, including Canada. By the end of 2020, Norway officials expect its Government Pension Fund Global to be worth the equivalent of $1.1 trillion US in today's money.

How about the world's best school system? This is obviously a subjective rating, but many experts make a case that Norway's school system, based on the mantra, "One School for All," is the best in the world.

It consistently ranks very high in every educational metric, and dovetails perfectly with the country's vision of providing employment and a place for everyone. Norwegians are expected to "master the art of living together." Maybe a bit left-leaning for some North Americans, but it works for them.

And how about the Syltelabb? This delicacy, a holiday favourite of the Norwegians, is to die for, especially if you have a thing, like they and I do, for boiled, salt-cured pig's trotters.

Norway is also the top-ranking country in the World Economic Forum's Global Energy Architectural Performance Index, which purports to measure how countries manage energy, through the metrics of economic growth, sustainability, and access. Norway does several things well in this regard, but one way it probably leads the world is in burning garbage in a profitable and clean way. This was a headline in the U.K.'s Guardian newspaper earlier this year: Trash to cash: Norway leads the way in turning waste into energy.

Tax incentives and a publicly funded network of recharging stations drive EV use in Norway. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The article explains that U.K. cities are paying to send rubbish to Norway, and Norway is importing as much rubbish as it can get, in an effort to generate more energy by burning waste in its vast and efficient incinerators.

And now, I've just learned that Norway leads the world when it comes to electric vehicle adoption. Norway, that oil-rich, cold-climate nation, has more EVs per capita than any other country.

Roughly one in six cars sold in Norway is an EV, a very healthy 16 per cent share. By my reckoning, about one in 250 cars sold in Canada during 2013 was an EV, for a 0.004-per-cent share. (The share gets even more molecular when you lump in the 978,000 cross-overs, SUVs and light trucks sold in 2013, many of which are used like cars.)

Norway created a way for EVs to flourish, through high tax incentives and a comprehensive and publicly funded charging infrastructure.

We don't seem to have the same appetite to invest in EV adoption and infrastructure in Canada.

But with Norway's track record of success in everything from making succulent dishes with pig's feet to making the best of anything energy-related, you wonder if maybe we should be following its EV lead more closely.

We're different countries with different characteristics, but there is no denying that Norway has the upper hand right now.

Lincoln sales spiked after Matthew McConaughey's much-ridiculed commercials for the MKC, in which he channels his True Detective character Rust Cohle. Could other automakers tap into Matt's vast repertoire?

MIKE DOJC

David Wooderson Dazed and Confused Corvette

Wooderson is a self-assured, chilled-out ladies man. He likes his rock American and loud, and his T-shirts tight and white, with a pack of smokes in the sleeve.

The seventh-generation Corvette, a 6.2-litre V-8 packing 460 hp and 465 lb.-ft. of torque is practically an eHarmony love match. It rocks out so much that the CEO of Chevy Korea says the model has been delayed due to the country's regulations on vehicle noise.

The pitch: "That's why I love these new Corvettes: I keep getting older but they stay the same age."

David Wooderson

Texas touch. Character study finds several good matches for Matt's charm

Lincoln sales surged 25 per cent in the U.S. last month — recording the marque's top October tally in seven years.

The sudden spike may have been powered by the navel-gazing Matthew McConaughey advertising campaign, where the actor uses his True Detective character Rust Cohle to deliver a reflective soliloquy while driving the MKC SUV.

Although widely spoofed by everyone from SNL to South Park, it looks like Lincoln gets the last laugh.

So we wondered what other vehicles could benefit from the Oscar winner's Texan twinkle and wide range of captivating characters.

Cooper Interstellar Tesla Model X

Cooper is a chiselled space cowboy who leaves his family behind to hurtle through a cosmic wormhole to a distant galaxy in search of inhabitable terra firma in hopes of saving mankind.

The hotly anticipated Model X and its electric powertrain may not reach superluminal speeds but the crossover certainly keeps up with this selfless hero's boldness and daring. The trailblazing car features rear falcon doors, which fold as they swing so they can open up in much tighter spaces.

The pitch: "Our greatest accomplishments cannot be behind us because our destiny lies on the open road ahead of us."

Tripp Failure to Launch Jeep Renegade

In a memorable turn from McConaughey's mid-2000s rom-com pumpkin patch, he plays Tripp, a charming, happy-go-lucky commitment-phobe still living with his parents at age 35.

Tripp

Always up for a good time, this cute and compact Italian-built all-wheel-drive baby Jeep with a slick exterior and a wily sense of adventure fits Tripp's world view to a tee — especially the Trailhawk.

The pitch: "I'm not afraid of love, but I'm an explore-all-terrains kind of guy. In the end it's all about epic fun and that's not just good for me, but civilization as a whole."

Ron Woodroof Dallas Buyers Club Challenger Hellcat

McConaughey reportedly dropped 47 pounds to play HIV-afflicted electrician Ron Woodroof, who defiantly hawks non-FDA-approved meds to legions of fellow patients.

That takes extreme dedication to your craft, a sentiment obviously shared in spades by the automotive engineers at Dodge. Why else would they put 707 horses under the hood of a production sedan, giving it the power to gallop an NHRA-certified quarter-mile in just 11 seconds.

The pitch: "Life is fast — zero-to-60 in 3.7 seconds fast; top speed of 328 km/h fast. Let me give y'all a little news flash: You only got one life. Make it mean something."

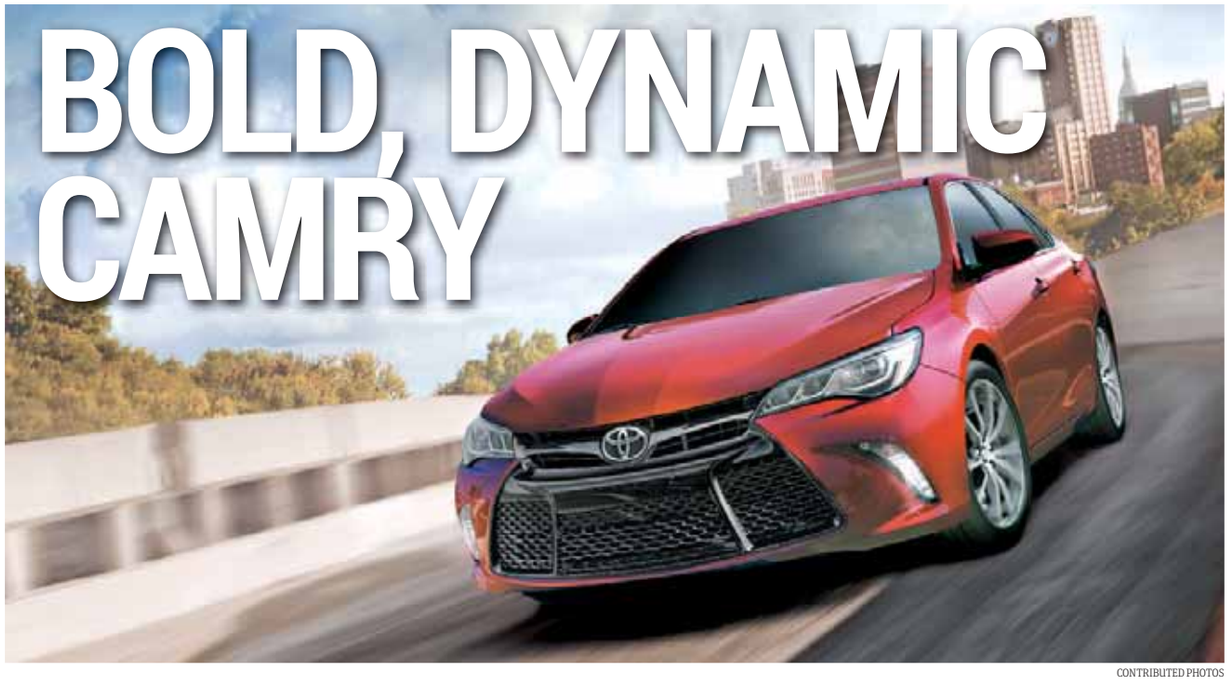
BOLD, DYNAMIC CAMRY



CONTRIBUTED PHOTOS

A bestseller now becomes even better with the redesigned 2015 Toyota Camry. Starting with the reliability and fuel efficiency already built into every Camry, Toyota has redesigned the 2015 Camry to create a car that is premium in looks and feel, but is still value-packed for Canadian buyers.

The Camry was redesigned from the ground up. It's now unmistakable from any angle, with a slightly longer body and a wider track that improves the car's stability and gives it a dynamic, athletic stance.

A sporty new XSE trim line joins the LE, XLE and SE, giving buyers even more choice in the extremely competitive midsize sedan segment.

The Camry's aggressive new front includes a wider, more prominent trapezoid grille that further punctuates the car's low, lean look, flanked by sharp slashes that incorporate the LED running lights. The new XSE goes a step further with its unique mesh grille and fascia, announcing its sportier suspension and driving characteristics.

On all models, the grille arches back to the sleek new lights. At the rear, wraparound tail lamps sweep into an attractive garnish below the trunk lid's integrated lip spoiler.

But the Camry's beauty isn't just skin deep. The chassis and body structure have additional spot welds for enhanced rigidity, which improves ride quality and cornering ability. The retuned suspension makes the new Camry far more responsive, but while it responds quicker to steering input, it never becomes a chore to drive. This improved steering feel inspires confidence and makes the Camry a true driver's car.

The XSE's suspension includes sportier shock absorbers and firmer bushings, higher-rate coil springs, and unique steering tuning that make it a standout, along with its trim-specific 18-inch wheels, heated sport seats, premium navigation system, and satellite radio.

The Camry lineup offers a choice of two engines. The 2.4-litre four-cylinder generates 178 horsepower and does a great job of getting the Camry quickly up to highway speeds, while it's smooth and efficient on the daily commute. For those who want even more, there's an available 3.5-litre V6 in the XLE and XSE that delivers 268 horsepower. Both engines mate to a smoothly-shifting six-speed automatic transmission.

The Camry is new inside as well, with new levels of refinement, roomier feel, premium materials, more soft-touch surfaces, and the quietest cabin yet. Seat materials range from premium cloth to genuine leather and Ultrasuede, with seats and door panels accented with high-contrast stitching.

On the SE, XLE and XSE models, the instrument cluster features a new 4.2-inch TFT (thin film transistor) colour screen that co-ordinates with the multimedia system to display audio and navigation information, communication, and vehicle warnings without being a distraction to the driver. The screen is nestled between three-dimensional Optitron gauges that not only look high-tech, but are easy to read.

The reconfigured centre console offers increased capacity and a convenient power source inside the storage box. On the centre stack, a new covered bin opens with a touch and includes an available wireless charging system for select smartphones.

As always, safety is a priority, and the Camry now has improved brake feel, along with 10 standard airbags including driver and passenger knee airbags, enhanced stability control, brake assist, and Smart Stop Technology.

All in all, the new 2015 Camry offers a better driving experience, more premium features, unmistakable sleek styling, and advanced technology features, while still maintaining Toyota's legendary commitment to safety and value.

HYBRID IS FUN AND EFFICIENT

The company that introduced the hybrid certainly knows a thing or two about making it better. Along with its gas engine Camry sibling, the Camry Hybrid is also new for 2015, with sleek new styling, premium interior and features, and new suspension and chassis tuning for improved and athletic driving dynamics that you might not expect from a gasoline-electric vehicle.

The sporty new Camry Hybrid SE has been added to the lineup to give hybrid buyers even more choice in trim levels. Toyota's engineers enhanced the front suspension's stabilizer bar and control arm bushings for a sharper steering feel and improved ride quality, while the stability control system is retuned for smoother intervention and more natural feel. Of course they did — it's a natural fit for an engine and electric motor combination that delivers 200 horsepower.

The aggressive new styling features a trapezoid mesh grille, strong upward-swept body line, sleek headlamps, and wraparound tail lamps. Inside, the Camry Hybrid includes premium seating material, roomier feel, and high-tech connectivity features such as available wireless charging for select smartphones. With available sport suspension, the 2015 Camry Hybrid is as much about fun as it is about efficiency.

Shift: From hybrids, technology, new vehicles and the environment, to saving money at the pumps

Porsche adds hybrid SUV to its stable of electric vehicles

Porsche has added a Cayenne hybrid tall wagon to its widening portfolio of electrified high-end vehicles for 2015 — joining the 918 Spyder super sports car and Panamera S E-Hybrid executive sedan. The Cayenne is the first premium plug-in hybrid SUV, the automaker says. Like the Panamera plug-in, the Cayenne S E-Hybrid packs a 333-horsepower 3.0-litre supercharged V6, supplemented by a 95-horsepower electric motor. The bigger-bodied Cayenne also gets a larger lithium-ion traction battery to feed that motor. With total system torque clocking in at 435 lb.-ft. between 1,250 and 4,000 r.p.m., it will sprint to 100 km/h in a reasonably quick 5.4 seconds.

Porsche says the new Cayenne S E-Hybrid is the world's first premium electric-powered SUV.

Detroit Electric close to production

Detroit Electric has finalized the exterior design of its pure electric two-seat SP:01, as it gears up for production in Leamington Spa, England. The lightweight, low-volume sports car will be billed as the world's fastest battery-electric car when it goes on sale in Asia, Europe and North America next year. The design has been subtly updated to improve the vehicle's aerodynamic performance. The most striking element is a new fastback configuration, replacing the prototype's high-edged "flying buttresses" on either side of the rear window. Cladding the battery pack in a protective composite casing has also improved torsional rigidity to better protect it from punctures in a collision.

The Detroit Electric sports car is ready for production in England.

Shift points

- Despite a slow start, the U.S. Environment Protection Agency says automakers are on track to meet tougher fuel economy goals for 2025. The agency says the fleet-average goal of 54.4 mpg can be met.
- The Guinness Book of World Records has certified that 507 electric cars attended an event in Cupertino, Calif. in September, beating the record of 481 set earlier this year in Germany.
- The Nissan Leaf has already surpassed its own sales record for the most U.S. electric vehicle sales in a year. Without releasing the number, Nissan says the Leaf outsold its nearest competitor by 50 per cent.

Google Cardboard and a Volvo Reality app combine to capture the driver's view from the XC90 SUV. AFP

Virtual reality. Volvo offers virtual test drive of XC90 with Google Cardboard

Volvo has become the first auto maker to embrace Google's Cardboard do-it-yourself virtual reality headset.

The Swedish company will be using the technology and a smartphone app to offer visitors to the L.A. auto show a new way to experience its latest models.

Google Cardboard turns any smartphone into a virtual reality headset. When combined with the Volvo Reality app from Google's Play store, Volvo fans will be able to slide their phone into the headset and get a sense of what it will be like to sit behind the wheel of the XC90 — Volvo's new flagship SUV.

"With a smartphone, cardboard, two lenses and a magnet, customers can experience a test drive that puts them in the driver's seat of the XC90," said Bodil Eriksson of Volvo Cars North America.

"With Google Cardboard, we can deliver an experience that is so much richer than simple videos or pictures. We can now transport people into a 360-degree world, where they can explore and experience the next-generation luxury SUV, months before it's in dealerships."

Volvo is working on an iOS version of the app and plans to offer a trilogy of test-drive themes. AFP

Toyota. First fuel-cell car hits streets in Japan, should arrive here next year

Toyota said Tuesday it would start selling the world's first mass-market fuel-cell car in Japan next month and elsewhere in 2015, in what its top executive called an industry milestone.

The four-door Mirai sedan, powered by hydrogen and emitting nothing but water vapour from its tailpipe, will launch with a price tag of 6.7 million yen ($64,900) in Japan, where Toyota expects to sell 400 units next year.

The Mirai, which means "future" in Japanese, will hit North America and some European countries in 2015.

"We are at a turning point in the automotive industry," Toyota chief executive Akio Toyoda said in a video message on the company website.

Toyota is aiming to sell "tens of thousands" of Mirais over the next decade.

A limited driving range and lack of refuelling stations have hampered development of fuel-cell and all-electric cars, which environmentalists say could play a vital role in cutting greenhouse gas emissions.

Toyota's Mirai, seen in Tokyo, can travel 650 km without refuelling. AFP

The Mirai can travel about 650 kilometres without refuelling, and its tank can be filled in a few minutes like gasoline engine vehicles, Toyota said.

"Mirai symbolizes two major innovations," executive vice-president Mitsuhisa Kato said Tuesday in Tokyo.

"First, this is an innovative way to solve global environmental and energy problems ... and second, this innovation will help usher in a hydrogen-based society."

Fuel-cell cars are seen as the Holy Grail of green cars as they are powered by a chemical reaction of hydrogen and oxygen, which produces nothing but water.

Tokyo has pledged to make hydrogen available at a price similar to, or less than, gasoline while boosting the number of refuelling stations to about 100 next year.

Meanwhile, Honda said Monday that it is aiming to launch a new fuel-cell vehicle in Japan by March 2016. AFP

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Don't be afraid to approach people in positions of power if you have an idea to put forward or if you would like to put yourself forward for promotion. You are guaranteed a positive response.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There will be no end of opportunities to complete outstanding tasks over the next few days, so forget about your daily schedule and have fun.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Accept that what people say is what they mean. If a friend has promised to do something for you then you must trust that they intend to deliver.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Don't waste time wishing you were somewhere else or doing something else. You are exactly where you need to be and you are doing exactly what you are supposed to be doing.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
If you apply pressure in the right place today you will accomplish something huge. Act as if you have total self-belief and others will be so intimidated they will help.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The outcome of a personal dilemma is in the balance but you are the one whose actions will decide which way it tips.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
The planets indicate you are destined to offend someone over the next 24 hours. So, whatever it is you are planning, do it quickly and do it well.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
With so much energy at your disposal you don't have to stick to the same old routines. Whatever natural talents you possess you can and you must make them work for you.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You have business to finish and you must not let anyone stand in your way. Don't let yourself be distracted by issues that have no relevance to the task.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may think if you take a risk it will pay off but can you be sure? Unless you are 100 per cent sure of the outcome you should play safe.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
A rival will try to intimidate you into doing things their way but their overly assertive attitude will make you want to do the opposite. Can you be sure that it isn't a double bluff? Maybe it's best to do nothing at all.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Introduce new methods into your daily routine. If you can do that then what you feared would take days to complete can be dealt with in hours.
